It is not often that a jail is empty but such is the case of the jail of Marion county just now. Not a prisoner is confined in its walls. The reason is all small law breakers are now turned over to work out their fines by getting out ore for the Jefferson Iron Co. They have a camp and guards near the site they are at work at and are responsible for all county convicts turned over to them. This is a good deal for the county as by this means all fines are collected.
